

The Architecture of Nature

The Architecture of Nature

For Many architects, their main source of inspirations has been the nature. The simplicity or the complexity of the nature helped to develop the building and it's surroundings. so, by mixing this two it helped to harmonize the human being in his living space. In a way, the nature can be fragile but powerful in the same time.

Through this project I would like to harmonize the toughness of the concrete and the softness of the nature. By doing so, my plan is to protect as much as possible the structure of the wall. As I believe that the paint it is harmless to be applied directly on to the wall, im going to draw a mural painting. By doing this I want to bring the nature closer to the actual city, by drawing pure nature directly on the wall, using the watercolour technique. The materials used in this projects are durable outdoor paints. In order to protect even more the drawing we could use a protector top coat. The paints have as main ingredient water, so, it is not dangerous for the environment and also for the people breathing in the closed space. Because the space in the building is quite small, I am thinking to apply my mural paint on to the wall. In this case, the 3D Paint effect will be created. My 10 years experience would proof the durability of the mural paint and also the quality of my work.

Nature has always been a source of inspiration for me and I strongly believe that we all need a little bit of nature and colour in our busy lifes, doesn't matter if it is a factory, office or outdoor space. I hope that I achieved my goal in order to to create this idea and accomplish it.

